Unique – valuable – continuous

Leading both operations and transformation at the same time is increasingly becoming the leadership challenge of this decade. This is because change is continuous, in contrast to the past where a change program was occasionally started to adapt organizations to new circumstances. This concept is still relatively new and so far has tended to emphasize the technical and process aspects of change.

In recent years, (non) executives in our network have expressed the need to exchange practical change stories. In the Netherlands there is not yet such a structural circle of (non) executive leaders who regularly share these kinds of personal experiences and learn from each other.

Based on our group events organized in the past, our successful change management masterclass, consultancy practice and personal experiences of the RibbonWood partners, we started the RibbonWood Transformation Circle. A circle in which members know and appreciate each other and interact personally a few times a year in a full service facilitated environment.
